HOW TO TE...

There is no excuse for any woman to pay for butter and get oleomargarine, declares Chemist Julius Taussig of Cleveland, Ohio. He says that it is a simple matter for any housekeeper to test the article she buys and find out for herself whether it is butter, butterine or oleomargarine.

The tests, according to Chemist Taussig, are quite simple. One test that he suggests is called the waterhouse test. Fill an ordinary tumbler partly full of milk warm enough to melt a small amount of butter. Add the butter, and after it has melted place the tumbler in a pan of ice-cold water, stirring its contents all the while with a small wooden stick.

If any foreign fats are present they will coagulate in lumps which can be drawn out with the stick, if pure butter has been put into milk it will granulate as it cools, so that it could not be readily separated from the milk.

Here is another test for butter: Get a spoon and place in it a piece of the suspected butter. Light an ordinary candle and hold the bowl of the big spoon over the flame. First place the spoon sufficiently far from the flame to permit the butter to melt without getting too hot. Stir the melted butter together until it is thoroughly mixed and then put the spoon closer to the flame, so that it gets more heat. Keep it stirred all the time and notice how it boils. If it boils in a noisy, sputtering way without any foam it is not the genuine article. Butter boils with little noise and plenty of foam.

TO KNOW ...

To save chicks put several stones in each pan or trough in which you keep water for your chickens; then when the little chicks happen to get into the pan they can get out by means of these stones and not drown.

Many vegetables may be seasoned with salt pork or bacon. Salt pork fat is, by some, considered to render a better flavor to fish, veal, poultry and game. Fat from the soup kettle is good to warm potatoes, make sauces or cook meat in.

One way to save steps is to nail a strip of varnished wood to the wall above the stove. Screw in a row of brass hooks and use them for iron spoons, strainers, broilers, small spiders and any utensil that goes direct from the hooks to the stove.

Don't waste time trying to use a paring knife with a loose handle. Remove the blade and nearly fill the hollow in the handle with powdered rosin. Heat the base of the blade and insert it quickly. The heat will cause the rosin to melt and act as a cement.

When taking a cutting from a plant form the habit of rubbing a bit of damp earth upon the end of the slip and also upon the spot where it was broken off. This prevents what is called bleeding—a loss of sap—and saves the vitality of both. It is putting salve upon an open sore.

To clean enameled ware, rub with fine ground pumice stone.

Never leave medicines, drink or food uncovered in the sick-room.

To remove a fish-bone from the throat, swallow a raw egg.

A drop of kerosene on the hinge of a door will stop its squeaking.

Do not let the comb soak in order to clean it. Use a stiff nail brush.

Dishes flavored with lemons are among the most palatable known.

A clean shell placed inside the kettle will prevent the formation of lime.

Oxalic acid and javelle water are excellent for removing ink stains.

Embroideries and colored garments should be ironed on the wrong side.

Covering the pan in which fish is cooking will make the fish soft.

Clean tins with soap and whiting, rubbed on with a piece of soft flannel.

One of the best health guards is the drinking of a great deal of water.

Odd bits of soap, when gathered up and boiled, make a splendid shampoo jelly.

To revive dying plants, pour a dessertspoonful of castor oil about the roots.

Take the pie out of the pan as soon as it is done to prevent the crust being soggy.

Marble should be washed with ammonia and water rather than soap and water.

A few drops of rose water added to almonds will prevent their oiling when chopped.

Large red apples when served whole on table are polished with olive oil.

A cold boiled potato may be used as a paste substitute for fastening back bits of torn wall paper.

To decorate a luncheon table, no flower may be utilized with more charming effect than the pansy.

When cleaning silver use gin with the whiting instead of water. It will give them a better polish.

In making a cake, grease the tin with sweet lard rather than butter, and sift a little dry flour over it.

When making a steamed or boiled pudding pleat in the cloth at the top to allow the pudding to swell.

The soft brushes used for polishing hardwood floors may be washed most thoroughly by the use of kerosene.

When beating eggs observe that there is no grease on the whisk, as it will prevent the eggs from frothing.

A glazier's knife will be found an excellent thing with which to scrape and clean the bottoms of tins and kettles.

A good treatment for white spots on the nails is a nightly application of paste made of equal parts of turpentine and myrrh.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice to a quart of water will make rice very white and the grains separate while boiling.

To cool an oven while baking never leave the door open, but cool it by dampers or removing one of the plates over the oven.

The best way to rest is to lie down; relax every muscle, lie as limp as a rag and banish from the mind all thought of work or care.

Charlotte russe is more appetizing and less sickening if it is flavored with sherry. This should be stirred in carefully, or the cream will curdle.

A powerful and cheap disinfectant for use in closets, stables, etc., may be made by taking chloride of lime, one pound, and water, three gallons.

An artistic receptacle for wood alcohol is a little kettle of hammered brass, with a long slender spout, a pretty addition to the tea table.

Use salt and sour milk to clean brasses.

Remnants of fat, either cooked or uncooked should always be saved, fried out and clarified if necessary.

Carpets are greatly freshened by washing with water in which a tablespoonful of ammonia is added to six quarts of water. After a thorough sweeping wipe with a cloth wrung out as dry as possible.

The heifer... be well fed and...

The dairy heife... bred sooner than th... breed.

When the calf is about fo... offer it shelled corn, and now... have it.

Where milk or butter is produced... is decided advantage in raising the calf by hand.

The dairyman of necessity must produce calves in order to have his cows freshen every year.

One of the chief causes of trouble in growing calves by hand is feeding them from unclean pails.

There is less cost in marketing a veal calf than in marketing the milk that it takes to produce it.

During the third week of the normal calf's life it will begin to nibble at hay, if any is in its reach.

The beef calf, in order to make quick and profitable growth, must receive an abundance of nourishment.

The calf, or any small animal running with its mother takes nourishment many times a day, each time in small amounts.

Butter or cream and meats of all kinds are concentrated finished products, hence they are easy to market and bring the highest prices.

The flesh of chickens fattened and finished on skim milk as the principal diet, in connection with crushed grains, is very light, tender and juicy.

Combining meat production with general dairying is a good combination, and one which will leave the largest proportion of fertility upon the farm.

During 1908 over 4,000,000 dozen eggs were exported from the United States. Great Britain alone brought 2,000,000 dozen.

Ducks should prove profitable on the average farm. They are easy to raise, develop fast, and soon are ready for the market.

Let the flock harvest the small turnips on the ground.

That old sheep that snuffles will be done for before spring. Let her go now.

To have good-sized sheep they must be grown rapidly while young, and it is important to give them a good start.

Be sure there are no ticks on the ewes. It is very costly to winter ticks and it doesn't pay. It is impossible to fatten a sheep infested with ticks. Look out for them.

Remove every dead tree from the orchard. They are veritable breeding places for fruit pests.

When spraying do not work with bare hands. They'll be sore if you do. Put on a pair of rubber gloves.

An orchard will live longer, bear better and be more profitable by being well cultivated and enriched.

A coat of paint inside the green-houses not only improves their appearance but destroys hundreds of insect eggs and fungus spores.

Roses recently cut back, taken up and re-planted must be judiciously watered at the roots but plentifully sprayed overhead.

Spraying with nicotine in bright weather and sprinkling with tobacco powder when dull are the readiest methods of destroying black fly in chrysanthemums.

Bud roses now. Choose healthy vigorous stock. A very pleasing effect is had by inserting buds of different varieties, generally teas, on the same stock. This makes a fine showing.

Correct feeding and successful keeping go together in fowldom.

Be on your guard against drafts. They are disastrous this time of the year.

The busy fowl is never sick. A breeding stock must be strictly hardy.

Laying hens will eat and digest 25 per cent more than the hens that are not laying.

The problem of soft shelled eggs will be solved if your laying hens are given free access to the grit box and prohibited from eating sloppy, watery mashes.

Warm houses and warm feed will keep fowls in excellent health and fill up the egg basket. Remember that lots of sunshine in winter will save lots of feed.

Feeding raw, wet cornmeal regularly is by no means, a good thing to do. Small cracked corn is always much more preferable, as it gives much better results.

Now that we are having cold weather, do not forget to give your poultry warm feed at least once a day. They will appreciate it and you will, find that it pays for the trouble.

Feed wheat dry and warm for breakfast. There is nothing better for cold weather egg making.

Perfect health and warm, not too warm but comfortable quarters are necessary to insure eggs.

Don't lose sight of the fact that it is the early hatched pullets that makes the best winter layers.

Carry out the droppings at least once a week. Too much work? Not half as much as to fight 10,000,000 lice.

There should be separate quarters for pullets if they are expected to do much of the laying during winter.

Every fowl should be perfectly tame, and the taming process should be commenced as soon as feeding begins.

Hens infested with vermin are not ... a condition to be profitable to their own... You can avoid that condition by pa... care.

One important secret of winter ... is to give the flocks all the work ... And this is but one of the many ... doing this.

Never sell either eggs or b... have not considered good ... your use. Its a bad busi... anyone.

... packages of sardines, chee... straws and cheese crackers, slightly warmed to increase their crispness, served with the new bottled pineapple juice and cracked ice, make a delicious snack requiring no previous preparation. Where a little more notice is given, one can prepare any of the following dishes and many others of a similar sort with very little trouble.

Dreams

Run good, snappy American cheese through the chopping machine and mix to a paste with melted butter. Make thin sandwiches of whole wheat or other bread with this paste for a filling, trim the edges nicely and brown on both sides in a little butter in the blazer of a chafing dish, or on a griddle if a number of people are to be served.

Fried Oyster Sandwich

Fry very large oysters and serve between thin slices of buttered brown bread with strips of salt cucumber pickle. Fried oysters are an old fashioned dish most welcome whenever the bivalves are in season.

Tartare Sandwiches

Broil a very thick sirloin steak carefully to avoid charring. Cool for several hours in the ice box. Cut into thin stripes—about three-eighths of an inch—with a sharp knife and serve between buttered bread with a thick dressing of tartare sauce.

Grilled Sardines

This is properly speaking a canape, which is nothing but a sandwich with the top let off. Toast slices of bread rather lightly and cut into stripe about the size of a sardine. Remove skin and bones from the fish, lay them on the pieces of toast and heat thoroughly in the broiler. Serve with thin slices of lemon.

Anchovies on Toast

Spread small squares of toasted bread or crackers with anchovy paste and place on each square one of the little rolled up anchovies which come in bottles from Italy. The squares should not be more than an inch and a half each way. Pineapple juice is especially good with this dish.

Mock Pate Sandwiches

Cook chicken livers gently in butter in a covered saucepan until tender. If chicken livers are not to be had young calf's liver will do. Cool without uncovering to prevent drying out. Run the livers through the chopper, mix to a paste with the gravy in the pan, and season highly. Use a rather thick layer of the pate between slices of bread.

Devilled Crackers

Spread a thick layer of chopped or grated dry cheese on any small cracker. Sprinkle with Cayenne pepper and a little mustard. Heat in a broiler or oven until the cheese begins to melt. Serve quickly and hot as one serves a rarebit.

"Granites"

For club dances, bridge parties, bowling sets, or anywhere where a cool refreshing drink is needed "Granites" are particularly acceptable. These are punches of a piquant sort with about one third more sugar added, then they are allowed to freeze slightly in a packing of ice and salt without turning. This gives minute particles of ice in a clear liquid and is daintier and newer than the ordinary frappe.

Regent Punch

Three lemons, one pound of sugar, two quarts of bottled Hawaiian Pineapple juice, one quart of very strong Oolong tea, and one quart of carbonated water. An attractive way to serve is in a cake of ice hollowed out for a bowl, or as a "Granite."

Punch With Mint

To the juice of three lemons, and a pound of sugar add three quarts of pure pineapple juice, and six slices of canned pineapples cut into small pieces. This makes a little more than one gallon and will serve twelve or fifteen persons liberally. Serve in large glasses half filled with cracked ice, with a bunch of well washed fresh mint, and one or two Maraschino cherries on top.

which" as THE TRANSCR... declared two weeks ago, "has it had the courage to name in the open." And recently, when also taunted by The Star for its cowardice, this bold purveyor of sneers and innuendoes, takes refuge behind two silly "reasons"; first that

"The donor of this corruption fund, at the time it was presented to the conspirators against the purity of an election, distinctly disavowed any vote buying object in his generous contribution."

Then in direct disproof of its own pretended reason, this quibbler adds

"And the others simply laughed at him and then went away and spent the money for votes. They knew what was expected of them."

All of which "first reason" amounts to, this viz., that the Every Evening "knew $53,000.00 was spent for votes", but because "the donor" set up a lying defence which didn't deceive the Every Evening, therefore it cannot prosecute. Could any lunatic in Farnhurst beat that for editorial tergiversation and "reasoning!"

But hear reason number two:

"Also the statute of limitation bars prosecution in this case. Had we possessed in time the proof that is now available, there might have been some move in the direction of prosecution."

Any dolt in the state that believes the Every Evening even now possessing any proof other than its cheap insinuation and bare say so? Why, were that true, its daily blossoming out in scare-head type, would make that noble exponent of civic purity—i. e. Republican civic purity—look like a circus poster! But to go back to this marvelous piece of conditional valor. "If we had possessed," etc. Ah! "if." Well, let us suppose so, what then? "There might have been some move etc." Perchance, maybe, the Every Evening would have actually done something besides talk—had not its courage, like Bob Acres', "oozed out at its finger ends." Might have been some move, etc." "A little—a trifle—just a bit—of a move, maybe! Cautious bravery, this hypothetical threat, safeguarded with two qualifications. "If we had, etc.—there might have been some more in the direction of a prosecution!" No rashness in that. If all these contingencies had happened the Every Evening would have quit prating, and really made at last "some move in the direction of a prosecution." Quite like opera boufe. In truth, since the crazy Quixote so valiantly charged the flock of sheep and the lying Falstaff hacked his own sword, heroic annals have not known so intrepid an achievement.

But to drop the comic of it all. The Every Evening asserts as precisely as it ever does anything that it "has reliable information," etc., that "proof is now available," of all this bribery. We therefore, challenge it to quit hiding behind its slurring generalities and come out into the light like an honest newspaper ...of being taken seriously, ...duce this proof, giving ..., place and circumstance will enable its readers ...ether or not "the ...hese conspirators," ... this much harped ...bribery. Or, in ...cular, we bid ...o or shut up." ...r, then THE ...mon with all ... fair play ...calumnia- ...ng sole- ...d gos- ...effect, ...upt- ...edi- ...r.

LEGAL

...County Teach- ...s held at Dover ...contrary to law and ...nor the Evening ...nor yet The Star, can ...ce in print the opinion of ...reputable lawyer in the State affirming the legality of such action. Come, NOW, since we are so benighted, enlighten us—do!

THAT LEGAL OPINION

THE TRANSCRIPT wishes to inform The Star's Dover correspondent and all others, that the "certain former State Treasurer" referred to by him, has not written a line for its columns for several years. And to remove from the shoulders of this "former treasurer" all responsibility for the legal opinion declaring Mr. dpaid's act illegal in holding the Teachers' Institute outside of New Castle County, we will state that the editorial in question was written by W. E. Wright.

OVERLAND MODEL 51

Price, $1,250.00

Tune: "Maryland, My Maryland"

We sing the praise to merit due,
Overland, our Overland!
The Touring Car, so tried and true,
Overland, our Overland!
It climbs the hills with lightning speed,
Is noted for its looks and deed,
All honor is its fitting meed,
Overland, our Overland!

With racy body, trim and neat,
Overland, our Overland!
And lordly owner in its seat,
Overland, our Overland!
It speeds away across the land,
And feareth not the mud nor sand,
And quickly answers each command,
Overland, our Overland!

In future days and future hours,
Overland, our Overland!
The world will tell thy wondrous powers,
Its place is surely in the van,
So scientific is its plan,
Let others beat it if they can,
Overland, over Overland!
